ACQUIT SHEPHERD OF ORPHAN'S MURDER

JURORS HAPPY OVER RESULT REACH VERDICT IN SIX HOURS

Prisoner Was Accused of Administering Typhoid Germs to W. N. McClintock, Millionaire Orphan, His Foster Son, in a Plot to Cause His Death and Thereby Gain Control of the Estate.

William Darling Shepherd, attorney, was acquitted of the charge of murder of William Nelson McClintock millionaire orphan at Chicago, Friday night by a jury in criminal court.

Shepherd was accused of administering typhoid germs to the youth, his foster-son, in a plot to cause his death and thereby gain control of the estate.

The jury deliberated five hours and 40 minutes. Members would not divulge the number of ballots taken, nor the methods by which they reached final agreement. They said that they had taken a collective oath not to reveal the record of the balloting.

As a result of the verdict Shepherd Friday night walked from the Cook county jail a free man after having been in custody since March 15 last.

He still faces another murder charge, but Judge Thomas J. Lynch permitted him to sign his own bond.

At the same time, the coroner's jury recommended he be held for the murder of Billy McClintock, it directed that he be held for the murder also of Mrs. Emma Nelson McClintock, Billy's mother, 17 years ago.

It is that charge which still hangs over his head, altho Friday night it was not believed by Shepherd's attorneys that he ever would be brought to trial on it.

Shepherd's face was wreathed in smiles as he heard the verdict read by the court clerk and leaped forward to thank the jurors who had acquitted him.

His wife, Mrs. Julie Shepherd, was not in the court room, having found the arduous task of a daily battle the six weeks' period of the trial too great a strain for her.

She waited with her friends at a downtown hotel for the verdict. At Shepherd's side, when the verdict was read, were his brother, J. Henry Shepherd of Little Rock, Arkansas, and his former law partner, Robert Steoll, who has been with Shepherd constantly in court. Despite stern warnings of bailiffs against a demonstration the crowd of curious rent the air with cheers.

Above the bedlam of cheers and the booming of flashlights of news photographers the foreman of the jury, William Burness, finally made himself heard.

He read a note of thanks the jurors had written to Judge Lynch expressing appreciation for his consideration and courtesy and the orderly manner in which the trial had been conducted.

The judge returned the jurors' expressions of good will, thanked them and released them until Saturday morning, when they can get the pay due them for their long service.

Meanwhile, Shepherd and his attorneys, William Scott Stewart and W. W. O'Brien, were waiting at the end of the jury box for a triumphal procession of handshaking and thank ing down its length.

Every juror returned smile for smile and handclasp for handclasp. None of the bitterness reported shortly after the jury retired was evidenced.

During the long deliberation, the voice of at least one juror was heard in harsh argument above the others.

A number of times, the name "Judge Olson" was heard.

LAMP POSTS OF OLD TINS

Beautiful ornamental lamp posts are being made from old tin cans and concrete by Ray Lambert, park commissioner, San Antonio, Texas. Mr. Lambert sends men to the city refuse heaps to collect discarded tin cans, which are hauled to an incinerator where the paper is burnt from them and the cans are then pressed in a form to make the skeleton or frame of a lamp post. Around this form wood is placed and then the skeleton is filled with concrete.

SAFE DRIVERS CLUB FORMED BY RAILROAD

Motorists Asked to Exercise Care at Highway Grade Crossings.

A "Safe Drivers' club" is being organized among the officers and employees of the Pennsylvania Railroad system who are drivers of automobiles. The purpose of the club is to warn motorists to exercise proper care when approaching or driving over railroad-highway grade crossings, to prevent being struck by trains. To become a member one must agree to drive carefully, approach all railroad highway crossings cautiously, and be assured that no train is approaching before crossing the tracks.

A neatly finished metal tag, bearing the slogan "Cross Crossing Cautiously," is furnished each member of the Safe Drivers' club, to be attached to the rear license tag of his car, as The background of this tag is blue, with letters of orange, matching the present Pennsylvania State automobile license tags.

The Safe Drivers' club is a feature of the Careful Crossing Campaign being conducted on the Pennsylvania railroad, and other railroads in the United States, under the auspices of the American Railway association, during the months of June, July, August and September. The object of the campaign is to bring to the attention of the American people the necessity of exercising the greatest possible care to avoid being struck and killed or injured by trains while traveling over highway crossings and to impress upon locomotive engineers, firemen, conductors, brakemen, track foremen, crossing watchmen and all other employees the necessity for doing everything within their power to prevent such accidents.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar P. Frazier entertained to dinner Sunday, June 21, Mr. and Mrs. Whitney B. Stout, of Sidney, Ohio; and Mr. and Mrs. Wilson S. Dunkle and Mrs. W. D. Stout, of Washington township. A most enjoyable time was had by all.

The many friends of Professor W. B. Stout, teacher of agriculture in the Sidney high school, were surprised to hear the announcement of his wedding on Wednesday, June 10, to Miss Maude Ellen Taylor, of North Canton Ohio. The wedding ceremony took place at the Community Christian church, Rev. M. A. Cossaboom officiating. Only the members of the immediate families were present. The party motored to Forest Inn immediately following the ceremony where a sumptuous wedding breakfast was served. Professor Stout is a graduate of the Ohio State College of Agriculture and a member of the Alpha Gamma Rho. He has taught in this city for the past three years and has found a large acquaintance here of many friends. The bride is also a graduate of Ohio State university, college of commerce and journalism. She has visited here on several occasions. After a trip thru Michigan and Indiana they will be at home at 129 Piper street, Sided, Ohio.—Sidney Daily News.

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity

Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milch cows to provide

- (1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
- (2) Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
- (3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.

This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides.

Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

HONOR PATRIOTS OF TICONDEROGA

Monument Records Glorious Deed of Revolution.

Where Lake George enters Lake Champlain, in New York state, the French in 1758 set up a post which they named Fort Carillon. This became a concentration point for French expeditions under Montcalm and others. In 1758 the fort was attacked by 16,000 British under Abercrombie. Though the French had but 4,000 men they beat off the enemy, causing the latter a loss of 2,000 men. A year later Amherst with 11,000 men took the fort after the French had retired. By the time of the Revolution the fort was generally known by its Indian name—"Ticonderoga," a corruption of the Iroquois word "cheondoroga," meaning "sounding" water. On May 10, 1775, Ethan Allen and 83 Green Mountain Boys captured the fort.

and valuable stores. Captain Delaplace was in charge of the garrison of 48 men. He was asleep when Allen rapped on his door with a sword. "Your errand?" demanded the sleepy commander. "I order you to surrender," said Allen. "By what authority?" inquired the astonished officer. "By the authority of the Great Jehovah and the Continental Congress," Allen is said to have replied. Benedict Arnold was a member of the American expedition.

St. Clair and 11,000 Continentals abandoned the fort in 1777 on the approach of Burgoyne with a superior force. Colonel Brown with 500 men tried to retake the place, but after capturing 300 prisoners and many farts, besides releasing 200 Americans, he had to retire. After the Revolution Fort Ticonderoga became a picturesque ruin, but was restored to something like its original state at the expense of Mrs. Stephen Pell of New York in 1900. A monument to the Continentals, shown above, who fought in and around Ticonderoga was recently unveiled at that historic place. It is the gift of Horace A. Moses. The work, executed by Charles Kock, shows Liberty triumphant.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Lafayette's Pride in American Citizenship

The following anecdotes of Lafayette appeared in the National Gazette of August 28, 1824:

As Lafayette passed the house of the late John Hancock in Boston, the mayor said to him: "There sits the widow of your deceased friend." He immediately caught her eye, and in the most enthusiastic manner pressed his hand upon his heart. She burst into tears and exclaimed: "I have now lived long enough!"

A man, while in conversation with Lafayette, observed he spoke the English language remarkably well: "And why should I not," he replied, "being an American just returned from a long visit to Europe?"

When we took a glass of wine in company with several other men with the general, previous to his landing at the quarantine ground from the Cadmus, one of the party addressed him both as marquis and general, and then asked him which he preferred. He hesitatingly and emphatically replied: "I am an American general."

Branded in the Valley

By MARTHA PIERCE

WNU Service

AS the day died, three horsemen rode down from the mountain and struck into the trail that leads across the mesa. They rode in silence, save once when the leader half turned in his saddle and spoke to the rider nearest him.

"How far is it, Jim?"

"Jim lifted his bridle reins, and his horse sprang alongside the big gray of the leader.

"Bout thirty miles yet," he said briefly; "we'll make it by nine o'clock."

The moon climbed up over a high bluff and looked down upon a little valley where a small, swift stream ran through green meadows. In the midst of the valley one tree stood like a sentinel near a low log house set a stone's throw from the brink of the stream.

A fire that leaped upon the hearth and flung its ruddy light through the small windows served to light the rude interior, its uncertain gleams half revealing, half concealing the rough uncouthness of a man who sat before the fireplace holding a child upon his knee.

"Now tell me," he was saying, "why you didn't go home with Mrs. Potter today, when she rode all the way over here on purpose. Mrs. Potter's right about it being too lonesome for you to stay here when I'm out in the hills. It is mighty lonesome for a little girl like you. You better let me take you over tomorrow." She shook her head until her misty hair flew out like an oriole.

"Who'd keep house for you?" she asked, as if that question settled the whole matter.

He laughed weakly. "You do take pretty good care of your old dad, don't you? And you're all the housekeeper he's had for a good spell now."

"Since ma went to heaven," said the child gravely.

He started and looked at her curiously.

"Who told you that?" he said, almost roughly.

"Told me what?"

She was looking at the fire intently, and had a half-absorbed expression. "That ma went to heaven. Oh, she told me herself, before she went, and she made me promise I'd come, too. She told me all about the angels and God and everything. She said the angels were all around, every place, and since she died I know it's true, 'cause I've seen 'em. There's one right there in the fire now. I've been seeing it ever so long. A little baby angel with its wings spread out to fly. See, pa? Right there, in the middle of the brightest—see?"

"No," said the man, slowly, "I can't quite make it out." Suddenly he started.

"What's that?"

He opened the door and looked out. Three men on horseback confronted him. He was covered instantly.

"We're onto you," said one laconically, "say your prayers."

He grew pale beneath the bronze, but he faced them resolutely, and stood a trifle straighter.

"What does this mean, men?" he said. "What have I done?"

The leader laughed grimly.

"When a man's too handy with his brandin' irons he's apt to run up against trouble some day. You've got about two minutes to make your last will and testament."

At last, after a minute as long as years, he spoke stumbingly, as if words of entreaty came hardly to his lips.

"You have homes, men, and little ones, maybe. Think of the child, and have mercy." He caught her up suddenly and held her before them.

Startled by the sudden movement, the big gray reared and pawed the air. There was a sharp report and a shrill scream through the stillness of the valley; then the father stood looking stupidly at the limp and senseless thing he held in his arms, and the swift red stream that dyed his shirt sleeve.

The big gray had bolted, and after a moment of horrified waiting the two who were left wheeled their horses and rode away through the night leaving the outcast alone with his dead.

The sun climbed up over the high bluff and looked down on the green valley where the one tree stood by the low log house. Under the tree a man was stooping over a little mound by the side of a long one, patting it softly and babbling to himself about his baby, and the little angel in the fire. After awhile he wandered away hatless and coatless toward the mountain.

No one lives in the house in the valley. They say that when the moon is full fire leaps upon the deserted hearth and flings a ruddy glow through the windows, and he who listens may presently hear the shrill scream of a child, and the clatter of fleeing horsemen across the mesa. But others say it is a myth, and one can see nothing but the moonlight reflected from the windows, and hear nothing save the dismal and long-drawn cry of a coyote.

Major Leagues Have Many Coast Players

A perusal of the rosters of the American and National leagues discloses the information that the Pacific Coast league, like Abou Ben Adhem's name, leads all the rest in the number of athletics furnished for these major league circuits. writes Les Goates in the Salt Lake Deseret News.

The Coast league now has 33 players on big league teams, counting only players capable of holding down their jobs regularly. The Southern association is second with 31. The American association is next with 30, and the International league is fourth with 25. These four circuits have provided a heavy majority of the major league players.

Koenig Is in Demand

Mark Koenig (above), youthful shortstop for the St. Paul Saints, is being eagerly sought by Miller Huggins, manager of the New York Yankees, to bolster up the eastern American league entry. Koenig, sensation of the Saints, was given a glowing report by Paul Krichell, chief scout of the Yankees.

George Chancey has 59 knockouts to his credit.

Amherst college has added basketball to its major sports program.

The Royal Canadian Golf association has decided to sanction the use of the steel-shafted club.

The world's longest golf drive, 470 yards, is claimed by Jimmy Gullane of Colorado Springs, Colo.

Gold wrist watches will be awarded the winning crews in the People's regatta, the big July 4 rowing contests at Philadelphia.

The Far-Eastern Athletic association has decided to hold the Olympic games in the Far East every four years instead of every two years after 1927.

Coach "Rusty" Cullow, University of Washington crew mentor, has announced that he would remain at Washington for another term of four years.

Sam Shaw of Oregon City, Ore., captain of the University of Washington 1923 intercollegiate champion crew, has signed a contract as assistant coach at Yale.

Corrine Condon, fourteen-year-old Omaha swimming star, slipped a tenth of a second from her own world's record of 21.8 in the senior 40-yard free style event at an official midwestern A. A. U.

Diamond Notes

The Cleveland baseball club has 17 players who grew up on farms.

Joe Wood has signed to remain three years longer as Yale baseball coach.

Pitcher Rudy Kallio has been sent back to Salt Lake of the Pacific league by the Boston Red Sox.

Riffe, University of Kentucky pitcher, hurled a no-hit-no-run game against Centre college at Lexington.

New Orleans has obtained Pitcher Watson W. Clark, a southpaw, from the Cleveland Indians on option.

Nelson (Chicken) Hawks, new first baseman of the Philis, is the hitting sensation of the league just at present.

The Cincinnati Reds are reported to be interested in the work of Benny Gaudette, a young outfielder with Jersey City.

Catcher Ernie Vick of the Cardinals was sent back to St. Louis by Riskey, while the team was on the road, because of an infected leg.

George Pipgras was turned back to the New York Yankees by Atlanta because of lack of control. He was ordered to report to Nashville.

Tommy Sullivan, outfielder and catcher of the Aberdeen (Wash.) team of the Independent Southwest Timber league, has been signed by Cincinnati.

According to baseball records only one man with one arm played in the big leagues. "One-Arm Dady" pitched in the old National league about thirty years ago.

Catcher Beumel of the Evansville Three-Eye league club has been released to the Saginaw (Mich.) club under option. Pitcher Meador also was released.

It is feared that Norman McMillan, St. Paul infielder, will be out of the game two months because of injuries suffered when he ran into the grand stand chasing a foul.

Ever since Hughie Jennings introduced his colorful style of coaching a large number of ball players have tried to imitate him, but to date none has been successful.

Joe Hauser, Athletics' hard-hitting first baseman, who broke his kneecap this spring, has discarded his crutches and is now getting around with the aid of a good strong cane.

A. C. Vance of Brooklyn loses but continues to strike out the opposing batters in great numbers, and Sisler and Hornsby continue to hit while their teams continue to lose.

Babe Ruth Gaining

Babe Ruth wasn't altogether successful in his springtime reducing efforts, but his recent illness has melted thirty pounds of his elephantine frame, as can be plainly seen in the picture above. However, he has got eight pounds of it back, and his appetite gives promise of more.

The Coffee Cure

Coffee was once regarded as a cure-all. The first advertisement of the beverage was published in the Publick Adviser of May 19, 1657, and announced that the proprietor of a shop in Bartholomew Lane, London, was stocking "a very wholesome and physical drink" called coffee, the virtue of which included helping the digestion, quickening the spirits, lightening the heart and proving "excellent good against eyesores, coughs, colds, headaches, gout, dropsy, scurvy, king's evil," and a long string of other ailments.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting, and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Will you let me help you select the memorial for your lot. Call at show room. NO AGENTS.

NO MONKEYSHINES

IN TENNESSEE.

There's a long, long tale a-winding
To Sunny Tennessee,
Where the monkey has been ousted
From the human family tree;
Where men believe the story that
Adam told to Eve
And women hold the theory
Men cannot deceive.

There a Wildcat is a Wildcat,
Right from the very start;
In the realm of Education
No Varmint plays a part.
There a White Man's still the critter
As he was first created;
And a Coon is just an animal
As hain't been elevated.

In regards to makin' moonshine—
That's our favorite occupation,
But relat' to the "throw-back"
We don't need education.
Old Darwin he may stand ace high
With the rest of this here nation.
But we demand in Tennessee
Unrestricted fermentation! —New

Geologist Explains

Causes of Landslides

In describing some troublesome landslides that have taken place in England, owing to wet weather, Mr. William Platt, author of "A Popular Geology," says:

The causes are simple enough. Whenever the geological formation is that of alternate hard and soft rocks, and when this occurs in any sufficiently steep bank, hill or mountain, there will always be the risk of a landslide, especially after heavy rains, which soak into the softer layers and make them loose and slippery.

Landslides may be divided into two classes—natural and artificial. The former occur in the wear and tear of nature.

That picturesque mountain in the Derbyshire Pennines called Mam Tor is so liable to landslides that it has been nicknamed locally "The Shivering Mountain." Another celebrated instance is the landslide near Shanklin, Isle of Wight.

At Merok, in Norway (Norangsdal) a huge landslide dammed up a river valley, causing the water to pile up and form a lake. The people who lived in the village in the valley managed to escape, but their red-roofed cottages can be seen today under the clear waters of the huge tarn thus formed.

Merit in Silence

Slight is the merit of keeping silence on a matter; on the other hand, serious is the guilt of talking on things whereon we should be silent.—Ovid.

THE HOUSE BY THE SIDE OF THE ROAD

(Sam Walter Foss.)

There are hermit souls that live withdrawn

In the peace of their self-content;
There are souls, like stars, that dwell apart,

In a fellowless firmament;
There are pioneer souls that blaze their paths

Where highways never ran;—
But let me live by the side of the road

And be a friend to man.

Let me live in a house by the side of the road

Where the race of men go by—
The men who are good and the men who are bad,

As good and as bad as I.
I would not sit in the scorner's seat,

Or hurl the cynic's ban;—
Let me live in a house by the side of the road

And be a friend to man.

I see from my house by the side of the road,

By the side of the highway of life,

The men who press with the ardor of hope,

The men who are faint with the strife.

But I turn not away from their smiles nor their tears—
Both are parts of an Infinite plan;—

Let me live in my house by the side of the road

And be a friend to man.

I know there are brook-gladdened meadows ahead

And mountains of wearisome height;

That the road passes on through the long afternoon

And stretches away to the night.
And still I rejoice when the travelers rejoice,

And weep with the strangers that moan,
Nor live in my house by the side of the road

Like a man who dwells alone.

Let me live in my house by the side of the road

Where the race of men go by—
They are good, they are bad, they are weak, they are strong,

Wise, foolish—so am I.
Then why should I sit in the scorner's seat

Or hurl the cynic's ban?—
Let me live in my house by the side of the road

And be a friend to man.

Insect Forager That Is Blessing to Man

A caterpillar, known as the "Painted Lady," is one of the most remarkable of insect foragers. These strange little creatures move in vast armies, but never attack field crops or cultivated flowers, but, seemingly with deliberate intent, clear the territory over which they move of many harmful weeds and grasses. The insects crossed the Mexican border some months ago and invaded southern California in great hordes. Millions of them would move past a flower garden or field of blossoming clover, stopping on the way only to attack nettles and weeds and leaving the blossoms intact. The army traveled across the famous Death valley in California at the rate of about fifteen miles an hour. The desert, which stops many insect migrations, appeared to hold no terrors for these, since they were able to find isolated patches of their favorite food sufficient to sustain life. The "painted ladies," which derive their name from the exceptionally beautiful coloring of their wings, have been long known below the border.

Transportation Triumph

Two steamers moved a hotel from Oakland, Cal., to Nome, Alaska. An entire caravansary with everything complete from the clerk's desk and a bench for the bellhops to the furnishings for the top-floor bedrooms was manufactured in pieces in California to furnish accommodations for the transient trade in the town near the Arctic circle where the pieces were reassembled into a furnished hotel.

AMUSEMENTS

Melodrama as you like it—this, in brief, sums up the latest Paramount production "Contraband," Alan Crosland's vivid picturization of the novel by Clarence Budington Kelland, now at the Met theater.

Those who read the book know that the story revolves around the efforts of a young girl editor in a small town to rid the community of the vicious political elements who are in control of the local government.

In the course of her investigations the girl discovers that even those forces that are presumably on the side of the low and order are in reality in league with her enemies. But with the knowledge that she is fighting for the right and with the help of a young professor, who has been a victim of the political ring, she is successful in cleaning up the town.

The picture is chock-full of thrilling action and sheds considerable light on present-day activities of rum-runners and bootleggers. The inside workings of a small-town newspaper are accurately portrayed, and the atmosphere and background of the average Main Street is true to life.

The film has its lighter moments and there is humor of a particularly appealing kind. The romance of the girl editor and the pompous professor furnishes many a laugh, and the rivalry between the photographer and the haberdasher for the honor of being acclaimed the handsomest and best dressed man in town adds to the merriment.

An exceptionally fine cast has been assembled, every member of which is perfect in his or her characterization. The feature roles are in the capable hands of such well known screen celebrities as Lois Wilson, Noah Berry, Raymond Hatton and Raymond McKee.

Tigers Like Water.

Tigers are extremely fond of bathing. In a zoo, if a tub be provided, they will eagerly make use of its facilities for ablution. They are first-rate swimmers, and in former days it was reckoned at Singapore that they "ate a Chinaman a night," swimming across from the mainland to get him.

All the buildings are in good repair. Tract No. 6, as herein described is described as in two tracts but will be offered as a whole.

Tract No. 6 contains 199.12 acres of

continued from page one. It was Judge Harry Olson, chief justice of the municipal court, who forced investigation of the death of Billy McClintock and the subsequent incident of Shepherd.

During the trial Judge Olson expressed keen disapproval of the efforts of the state's attorney. That official, flanked by George E. Gorman, first assistant, and Joseph Savage, another of his aids, sat along side the jury box railing apparently disappointed.

The prosecutors were virtually unnoticed as the crowd swarmed by them to congratulate Shepherd and the victorious lawyers.

Shepherd was released from the county jail an hour after he heard the not guilty verdict. At the entrance he was met by another crowd and more flashlights.

Griming broadly and accompanied by Attorney Stewart, he was hurried into a waiting automobile and whisked away to meet his wife.

In the courtroom rush to touch Shepherd or speak to him, chairs were overturned, several women had dresses nearly torn from their backs and straw hats suffered in the demonstration.

Prosecutor Crowe and his staff said nothing beyond expressing astonishment over the verdict after the long deliberation.

Words welled from Stewart, and O'Brien, the defense attorneys, however.

"It is a vindication of the jury system," said Stewart. "It proved that 12 fair-minded men can be picked from at large and return a just verdict based on the evidence adduced for their ears. It demonstrated that they believed Shepherd was a victim of a diabolical plot and the verdict was a virtual vote against Faiman, Marchand, Olson and the others who sought to imprison an innocent man for the mere sake of breaking a will."

Three weeks and three days the struggle required for a jury, 12 days for hearing witnesses and three days for the jury pleas by four of the six attorneys participating in the trial.

Persecution was the plea of the defense, a prosecution instigated and forced by powerful interests bent upon breaking the will of young McClintock made in favor of Shepherd a few months before he was overtaken by typhoid fever.

A diabolical plotter Shepherd was termed by the prosecution, a man who began to scheme to claim the McClintock million 17 years ago when he first went with his wife to live with Mrs. Emma Nelson McClintock, school day friend of Mrs. Shepherd and mother of Billy McClintock.

The slaying of young McClintock just in time to prevent his nullifying the will by marrying Miss Isabelle Pope, a young school teacher, was called the last sinister act of the long conspiracy.

COLORADO CALLED RIVER OF MAGIC

Easily Most Dramatic of American Waters.

The Colorado is the most dramatic of American rivers—perhaps, if you put prophecy ahead of history, of all rivers. The swift advance of population have denied, it might have produced a civilization as different from that of its neighbor, the Mississippi, as that of the Mississippi is from the cultures of the Danube and the Rhine.

From its inception, 14,000 feet above the sea, through its flaming mile-deep canyons and along its swollen delta, where it has laid down 300 feet of fabulously rich soil, it is a stream with a pulse and personality peculiar to itself. It is the product of a region of abrupt contrasts—of flowing water in an arid land, of monumental rocks and plunging chasms, of flashing futuristic colors. It has none of the classicism of the Hudson or the Potomac; it was carved and painted long ago by some Society of Independent Artists who did not work by precedent. The magic is not wholly out of it even now. Even now it may be capable, despite the transcontinental railways and highways, which send travel across the river valleys instead of up and down them; despite, also, the motion picture, the radio and the popular magazine, of laying a spell upon the race of men. It may give a new rhythm to their dances, a new cadence to their songs, a new boldness of line and color to their arts. For one cannot think of a population in the valley of the Colorado as serving purely materialistic gods, as sentencing themselves to a dour puritanism.

The Colorado is capricious and full of a wild humor. Its average flow, below the Grand canyon, is about 20,000 second-feet, yet there is good evidence that in time of flood it has sent down as much as 500,000 second-feet—an increase of 2,500 per cent. When a flood of even a third of this volume emerges upon the delta, augmented by the waters of the Gila, the ranchers in the Imperial, the Coachella and the Palo Verde have cause to tremble. Throughout its lower course the river bestrides a great hogback of silt, which it is raising at the rate of a foot a year and which is now nearly 80 feet above the sea level and from 100 to 300 feet above the level of the Imperial valley. In 1905 it broke through a temporary irrigation intake and flowed for eighteen months into the Salton sea. Had the deluge continued, or if it were to recur, the river would drown out, probably for the life of this generation, 90 per cent of the Imperial's 350,000 acres of cultivated land. "It is a great devil fish," said one Californian, testifying last year before a congressional committee, "reaching over into the Imperial valley and trying every way to get there." It flips a jocosse tentacle and wipes out the life work of thousands of human ants. In ten, fifteen or twenty-five years, according to chance and the temperament of the engineer who makes the estimate, it will again emerge from its bed and menace the valley lands. This is one reason, and the most imminent one, for the proposals now pending in congress for a comprehensive development of the whole of the lower basin.—Robert L. Duffus, in the New Republic.

Met Natural Death

Two dead whales found floating off the northern California coast were not victims of bombarding by the guns of the battleships in the "battle" of Hawaii, as first believed. The whales were killed and mutilated by a school of orca, or killer whales, otherwise known as wolves-of-the-sea. Swimming in droves these killers attack the largest whale much the same as moose or deer. The orca, which are usually more voracious in the Far North, were attracted south to the California and Oregon coasts by the presence of fur seals now on the regular pilgrimage to rookeries on the Pribiloff islands.

Claims American Fortune

Mrs. Mary O'Connor Tinsdall of 30 Doon street, London, who has been shelling peas in Covent Garden in London for 50 years, and claims the world's championship for that art, has put in claim for the fortune of John O'Connor, the reclusive shoemaker of Hastings, Neb., who died 12 years ago, leaving a fortune of $150,000, which has grown to $250,000 since. However, she is but one of 500 O'Connors from all over the world who have put in claims for the fortune. Mrs. Tinsdall thinks she is the late reclusive sister.

A Cow and Her Horn

Paul, age four, was making his first visit in the country and was introduced to the cow. The animal's horns interested him most as his only experience with horns had been with those of tin, campaign variety.

Later, while at dinner, Paul heard the cow bawl and called out: "Oh, mamma, listen to that cow blowing her horn."

Dawgone It

Zac Sanderson, Universal's most persistent office seeker, has an Aire tale and when Lee Jacobson ventured a burst into song one day, the dog joined in, lustily.

"Come on pup," pleaded Zac, "don't waste your time singing duets with that bird, he can make racket enough by himself."

Man a Colloid, Science Declares, Meaning Glue

Baltimore, Md.—Science today answered the question of the ages. For generation after generation has asked "What is man?" and the chemists today answered, "Man is a colloid."

Least man should become unduly elated at his scientific distinction, the chemists went on to describe what a colloid is. Scientists have distinguished for a long time, they said, between crystalline substances, liquids and gases. About a quarter of a century ago they began to admit that in addition there existed a whole range of substances which were glues, or glue-like in nature. To these was applied the name "colloids," derived from "kolle," the Greek word for "glue." Man, according to the chemists, therefore, is a glue—a fact which explains much of his perseverance.

VIA THE 4:15 TRAIN

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(© 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

EMMIE DAVENPORT knew now that only a miracle would bring her a husband. One by one she had seen the friends of her girlhood grow to womanhood and walk off with the few eligible youths for miles around until the whole country was shorn of young men.

Furthermore, no men who had once left Oxbow village ever returned. Small wonder that the thin line of rails just south of the town held a mystic charm for Emmie. And she had an especial fondness for the 4:15. She never failed to wave her blue gingham apron and always dimpled and laughed when her salutes were returned by travel-jaded passengers or good-natured trainmen.

Then one day, picking berries close down by the embankment, she spotted a particular brakeman in blue jumpers who leaned nonchalantly in the door of the caboose. She was near enough to see that he was healthily freckled and that he grinned infectiously as he flung her a gay greeting.

From that day it was to him, and him alone, that Emmie waved. It was of him that she dreamed at night.

Now Oxbow village can be reached by automobile, but only by the most ambitious. Yet one night an old acquaintance of Emmie's appeared suddenly in a much abused car beside a most profane husband, who swore that, sick mother-in-law or not, never again would he drive a car to Oxbow village.

The old acquaintance was Ella Bainton and after ascertaining that her mother, reported by telegraph to be dying immediately, was sufficiently recovered to get her own meals she made speedy rounds of the village, calling, as fate would have it, first on the Daventports.

"Poor thing!" Ella had gloated, "how do you stand it buried here?"

Two bright spots glowed in Emmie's cheeks, and her slim hands clenched. "I'm—I'm engaged," she said, "although nobody knows it yet! He's a railroad man!" she declared. "Goes through here every day and although he can't stop off he always signals. Some day"—she paused for Ella was not listening. She was calculating just how many people she could spread the news among before hauled from the village by a husband keen to return to civilization.

It speaks well for Emmie's previous reputation for veracity that not for one minute did Ella doubt her word. Nor, for that matter, did the neighbors. Nor did Emmie's mother, to whom the choice morsel of gossip eventually came, although she found her daughter oddly reluctant to divulge any details as to her meeting with her fiancé, his prospects, or their plans.

Emmie herself underwent various phases of emotion. Chagrin, remorse, and gradually a sort of guilty pleasure. Her status had certainly improved. More than that, she could almost believe that some definite bond had been established between herself and the blue-clad figure with whose daily salutes the entire neighborhood now concerned itself.

Emmie took absorbedly to berry-picking, spending most of her time down by the embankment. It was on one such afternoon as she sat waiting for the arrival of the express that she found herself wishing that something would happen to slow the monster down and afford her more than the fleeting glimpse of her mythical fiancé.

Not quite as she had imagined, her wish materialized. Something somehow went wrong with the engineer's brain of heart or hands, or with the signals set for him, for when they found him he had gone beyond the reach of earthly inquiries.

At the switch just below Emmie's the mammoth locomotive suddenly cavorted, leaped the rails, and piled up the string of cars in the rear.

White and shaken, Emmie was among the first at the dreadful scene. But only by chance did she, some time later, stumble on a blue figure thrown clear of the debris—a figure which evidently the doctor after a casual inspection had taken to be lifeless, for with a shake of his head he was hastening by.

Emmie, alone, threw herself down by the quiet figure. "My darling, my darling," she moaned. "Heaven brought you to me too late."

The figure stirred—ever so slightly. "Not Heaven—rather the 4:15, and that is always on time!" For a second, roguish blue eyes looked into hers; then a spasm of pain crossed his freckled face and he lapsed into unconsciousness.

A month recuperating at Emmie's, a constant dependence on her willing hands and feet, a continual companionship—but why elaborate? Other men before the hero of this story have fallen in love with their nurses.

But the neighbors and Emmie's mother, on the day that the 4:15 took them out into the world where life is lived with a capital L, shook their heads wonderingly and discussed in bewilderment just how a man and a girl could become engaged with only a toss of a hand and the wave of a blue-checked apron.

LOST FIGHT FOR FREEDOM

Noblesville, Ind., June 25.—(UP.)—D. C. Stephenson, former grand dragon of the Indiana Ku Klux Klan, today lost his fight for freedom on bond, while awaiting trial on charges of murdering Miss Madge Oberholtzer, of Indianapolis.

Judge Hines in Hamilton county court ruled that Stephenson was not entitled to bail after weighing evidence presented at a four-day hearing last week on the bail plea.

Judge Hines also denied the bail petition of Earl Klenck and Earl Gentry, jointly indicted with Stephenson.

Perhaps He is Dating Up His Jungle Sheba

Wonder what this gaily dressed individual is talking about!

Perhaps he is "dating up" his best girl or arranging for a "little party" for the evening. The photographer forgot to have an interpreter present when he snapped the picture.

Anyway it has been established that the young man is a Zulu Chieftain and is talking somewhere in the heart of darkest Africa and seems to enjoy the experience.

The telephone he is using is an American made instrument from the shops of The Western Electric Company, one of the affiliated Bell system companies, and is the same as used by The Ohio Bell Telephone Company.

Did you note the latest style in foot wear this gentleman affects? Let us hope our flappers do not take it up.

Every day someone discovers a new use for the telephone. Recently three persons living in Middle Haddam, Conn., who had been arrested for failure to license their dogs, were unable to get to court on account of blocked roads. The justice of the peace in charge of the case heard the evidence over the telephone and fined each $1 and costs. This was mailed in and the case was ended.

Queer Contributions to Medical Science

The Warwickshire county councillor who bequeathed his body to the General hospital, Birmingham, in the hope that light would be thrown on the origin of headache, "the unmerciful scourge that has wrecked my happiness from my earliest recollection," followed a long line of posthumous benefactors to medical science.

Perhaps the most remarkable of all was Jeremy Bentham, the philosopher, who directed that his skeleton should be clothed, provided with a specially molded wax head, and presented to the medical section of University college, London, where it may still be seen.

Hospitals often receive queer bequests. Charing Cross hospital not long ago received a bag containing forty-eight farthings, a bust of Queen Victoria, and the return half of a railway ticket. Another famous hospital received the deeds of a freehold house, a pawnticket for a valuable sporting trophy, a diamond ring, several prize rabbit skins, and twenty aspidochelons in pots.—London Times.

City of Quaint Dress

The city of Seoul, now called Kello, the seat of the Korean government, is a place of quaint dress. White is the universal color of outer clothing, whether for men or for women. The women, who are short and fat, wear fantastic balloon cotton skirts. The men wear a "Mother Hubbard" robe, baggy trousers tied at the ankles, and a transparent "plug" hat, many sizes too small, tied under the chin. Long thin whiskers, great horn-rimmed goggles, hair put up in a queer topknot to signify manhood, and pipes with stems two or three feet long complete the picture. When in mourning for a male relative a man wears an immense straw hat shaped like a toadstool.

Chairs and Their Makers

It is probable that very early in American cabinet making rocking chairs were introduced. It is not unreasonable to attribute their origin to a date previous to the Revolution, but after 1750. Not until the Nineteenth century was well under way, however, did that type become common as an article of furniture. It is probable also that Windsor chairs were the first to be fitted with rockers. The Windsor chair itself was invented in England, and its comfort quickly made its appeal. The old chair makers knew how to adapt their furniture to the human anatomy and the American inventor of the rocker added still more comfort.

TEACHERS' MEETING

Is Closed—Homes Scored By Mrs. A. H. Reeve.

Cedar Point, June 26.—The Ohio State Teachers' Association's annual convention closed here today with an address by Mrs. A. H. Reeve of Philadelphia, president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, in which Mrs. Reeve lamented the apparent neglect of moral, physical and civic education in the home.

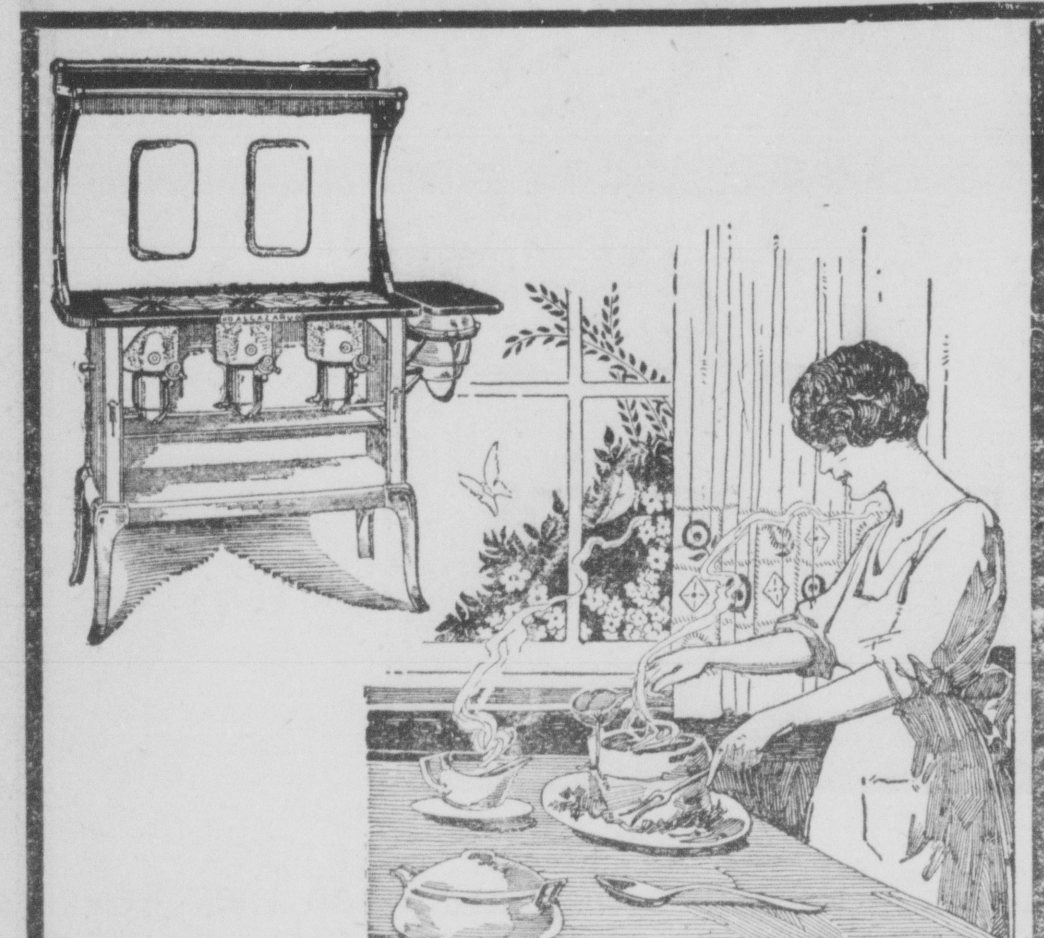

Declaring that automobiles, movies and jazz dances were responsible for present criticized conditions among the youth of school age, she asserted that their elders wanted to enjoy these same modern pleasures and that they were kept back largely only by convention and public opinion.

Dr. George Carrothers of Ohio University, asserted school conditions in many places in Ohio were as bad as those in the Philippines. Dr. Lawson G. Lowery, director of the child guidance clinic of Cleveland, asked for a higher personality and mental rating of teachers.

GOLF INSTRUCTOR

Torrence late yesterday after inquest into the death of Miss Irene List, 22, Circleville school teacher, who died after misapplying poison, purchased for her by Brabant.

What Do You Know About Sole Leather?

HERE ARE A FEW LEATHER FACTS:

The best leather is tanned Steer Hide. Steers are raised for their meat—not for their hides. There is as great a difference in the quality of leather as in the quality of meat.

Good leather always comes from over good meat, and vice versa. Heavy hides are taken from cattle four years or older. Most thick leather nowadays is artificially swelled by acid—often sulphuric acid, which rots the fiber, rots the stitching and destroys the wear. The breeding up of cattle by dairymen and the younger kill to supply tender meat, produce the best hide and the best leather, of medium thickness.

Country hides are badly cut in the skinning and are of little value for so long leather.

Most new-paper quotations are on country hides. Packer Hides are rarely flesh-cut in skinning and, therefore, bring several times the price of country hides.

Hides are always heavily salted to preserve, and are sold salt and all.

The average weight of a green-salted, steer hide is 60 lbs. To properly tan, it must remain in the tanning liquors from six to nine months.

A 60 lb. green salted hide will lose 20 lbs. or $\frac{1}{3}$ its green weight in a good, natural, non-acid tannage.

A tanned hide will give four distinct qualities of leather.

Dolls of Long Ago

Every once in a while these modern days, the people of the world discover that some of their vaunted inventions are not so new after all.

Dr. George Byron Gordon, director of the University of Pennsylvania museum, said that the museum today contains specimens of dolls dating from 3600 B. C.

In one collection there is a set of dishes—doll dishes—dating from 4500 B. C. There are toy chariots, toy horses, toy drivers.

VETERANS IN SESSION

Canton, June 25.—The annual encampment of Veterans of Foreign Wars opened here tonight. After a business session a memorial service was held. Adjutant General Henry Lawson of Kansas City will be present tomorrow and Saturday, it was announced. The encampment closes Saturday with election of officers. Tomorrow afternoon delegates to the convention will place a wreath on the tomb of President McKinley.

EASTERN BELIEFS CONCERNING CRYSTAL

The two largest flawless crystal spheres in the world were recently exhibited in New York. One of them measures nine inches in diameter and the other just fifteen-sixteenths of an inch less. The value of the pair is placed at $50,000.

The spheres were brought to New York from China, where they were cut from a perfect Burma crystal with a small metal hatchet. The work required infinite patience.

In ancient times in the Far East and in Europe crystals were supposed to be ice in permanent form. In Japan small crystals were said to be the breath of the Great White Dragon, while the larger ones were supposed to come from the Violet Dragon.

World's Deepest Well

The deepest well in the world was completed recently by engineers near Latrobe, Pa., when they struck natural gas at a depth of 7,428 feet, or almost one and one-half miles, says Popular Science Monthly. Work on the well was begun in 1922, and drilling continued for 30 months. The gas is now flowing at a rate of 500,000 cubic feet a day. The cost of sinking the well was about $200,000.

PATRICK E. CROWLEY

New York Central's President To Be Doctor of Laws.

(N. C. W. C. News Service.)

New York, June 26.—Patrick E. Crowley, whose railroad career has extended from messenger to a station agent at age of 18, then to President of the New York Central lines, will receive the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws, at Villanova College, next Tuesday it was announced today.

The history of Mr. Crowley's attainment, from messenger boy on the Erie Railroad to the presidency of one of the largest railroad systems in the world, is considered a chapter of business romance. His first job was as messenger boy at the station in which his father, Dennis Crowley, was station agent, at the age of 12. Two years later, without waiting to finish the grammar course in school, he took a full-time job as messenger at $5 per month. When he was 18 years old he was appointed station agent on the Erie at Custer City, Pa. There he qualified as a dispatcher's operator, and this resulted in his transfer to the Erie dispatcher's office at Buffalo.

In the late eighties he became an employe of the New York Central when that road leased the Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg railroad, and was promoted to chief dispatcher and transferred to Watertown, N. Y.

Two months later, he was promoted to Trainmaster. On September 12, 1900, he was appointed Chief Trainmaster. On August 24, 1901, the day before his 37th birthday, he was appointed Superintendent of the Pennsylvania Division, with headquarters at Corning, N. Y.

Three years later he was made Assistant General Superintendent, with headquarters at Syracuse, N. Y., and on March 1, 1907, he went to Albany as Assistant General Manager. On April 15, 1912, he became General Manager, and then General Manager, lines East, of the New York Central, at New York. On September 14, 1918, he was made Vice-President in charge of Operation, which position he held until he became Federal Manager of the New York Central for the war period.

In June, 1890, he married Miss Caroline Nichols of Attica, N. Y. They have two sons and two daughters.

My country, 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty,
Of thee I sing;
Land where my fathers died,
Land of the pilgrims' pride,
From every mountain side
Let Freedom ring.

My native country, thee,
Land of the noble free,
Thy name I love;
I love thy rocks and rills,
Thy woods and templed hills,
My heart with rapture thrills,
Like that above.

Let music swell the breeze
And ring from all the trees
Sweet Freedom's song;
Let mortal tongues awake,
Let all that breathe partake,
Let rocks their silence break,
The sound prolong.

Our Father's God, to thee,
Author of Liberty,
To thee we sing;
Long may our land be bright
With Freedom's holy light;
Protect us by thy might,
Great God, our King.

ACQUIT SHEPHERD OF ORPHAN'S MURDER

JURORS HAPPY OVER RESULT REACH VERDICT IN SIX HOURS

Prisoner Was Accused of Administering Typhoid Germs to W. N. McClintock, Millionaire Orphan, His Foster Son, in a Plot to Cause His Death and Thereby Gain Control of the Estate.

William Darling Shepherd, attorney, was acquitted of the charge of murder of William Nelson McClintock millionaire orphan at Chicago, Friday night by a jury in criminal court.

Shepherd was accused of administering typhoid germs to the youth, his foster-son, in a plot to cause his death and thereby gain control of the estate.

The jury deliberated five hours and 40 minutes.

Members would not divulge the number of ballots taken, nor the methods by which they reached final agreement. They said that they had taken a collective oath not to reveal the record of the balloting.

As a result of the verdict Shepherd Friday night walked from the Cook county jail a free man after having been in custody since March 15 last.

He still faces another murder charge, but Judge Thomas J. Lynch permitted him to sign his own bond.

At the same time, the coroner's jury recommended he be held for the murder of Billy McClintock, it directed that he be held for the murder also of Mrs. Emma Nelson McClintock, Billy's mother, 17 years ago.

It is that charge which still hangs over his head, altho Friday night it was not believed by Shepherd's attorneys that he ever would be brought to trial on it.

Shepherd's face was wreathed in smiles as he heard the verdict read by the court clerk and leaped forward to thank the jurors who had acquitted him.

His wife, Mrs. Julie Shepherd, was not in the court room, having found the arduous task of a daily battle the six weeks' period of the trial too great a strain for her.

She waited with her friends at a downtown hotel for the verdict. At Shepherd's side, when the verdict was read, were his brother, J. Henry Shepherd of Little Rock, Arkansas, and his former law partner, Robert Steoli, who has been with Shepherd constantly in court. Despite stern warnings of bailiffs against a demonstration the crowd of curious rent the air with cheers.

Above the bedlam of cheers and the booming of flashlights of news photographers the foreman of the jury, William Burness, finally made himself heard.

He read a note of thanks the jurors had written to Judge Lynch expressing appreciation for his consideration and courtesy and the orderly manner in which the trial had been conducted.

The judge returned the jurors' expressions of good will, thanked them and released them until Saturday morning, when they can get the pay due them for their long service.

Meanwhile, Shepherd and his attorneys, William Scott Stewart and W. W. O'Brien, were waiting at the end of the jury box for a triumphal procession of handshaking and thank ing down its length.

Every juror returned smile for smile and handclasp for handclasp. None of the bitterness reported shortly after the jury retired was evidenced.

During the long deliberation, the voice of at least one juror was heard in harsh argument above the others.

A number of times, the name "Judge Olson" was heard.

VIOLATORS OF LIQUOR LAWS FOUND GUILTY

Queen of Rum-Running Ring Among Fourteen Who Entered Pleas.

Toledo, O., June 26 (UP).—Sheriff Pal Burkhardt, Williams county, and four other defendants in the May Moss liquor conspiracy trial here were found guilty by a federal court, which reported after a nine-hour deliberation.

The others convicted were; John Peterson, John Costed and William Green, all of Monroe, Michigan, alleged rum smugglers and Mrs. Jacob Wedeman, proprietor of a roadhouse near Fort Wayne, Indiana.

Three defendants were dismissed during the trial. Mary Moss, heralded "queen" of the alleged rum-running ring, was among the 14 who entered pleas of guilty.

LAMP POSTS OF OLD TINS

Beautiful ornamental lamp posts are being made from old tin cans and concrete by Ray Lambert, park commissioner, San Antonio, Texas. Mr. Lambert sends men to the city refuse heaps to collect discarded tin cans, which are hauled to an incinerator where the paper is burnt from them and the cans are then pressed in a form to make the skeleton or frame of a lamp post. Around this form wood is placed and then the skeleton is filled with concrete.

SAFE DRIVERS CLUB FORMED BY RAILROAD

Motorists Asked to Exercise Care at Highway Grade Crossings.

A "Safe Drivers' club" is being organized among the officers and employees of the Pennsylvania Railroad system who are drivers of automobiles. The purpose of the club is to warn motorists to exercise proper care when approaching or driving over railroad-highway grade crossings, to prevent being struck by trains. To become a member one must agree to drive carefully, approach all railroad highway crossings cautiously, and be assured that no train is approaching before crossing the tracks.

A neatly finished metal tag, bearing the slogan "Cross Crossing Cautiously," is furnished each member of the Safe Drivers' club, to be attached to the rear license tag of his car, as The background of this tag is blue, with letters of orange, matching the present Pennsylvania State automobile license tags.

The Safe Drivers' club is a feature of the Careful Crossing Campaign being conducted on the Pennsylvania railroad, and other railroads in the United States, under the auspices of the American Railway association, during the months of June, July, August and September. The object of the campaign is to bring to the attention of the American people the necessity of exercising the greatest possible care to avoid being struck and killed or injured by trains while traveling over highway crossings and to impress upon locomotive engineers, firemen, conductors, brakemen, track foremen, crossing watchmen and all other employees the necessity for doing everything within their power to prevent such accidents.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar P. Frazier entertained to dinner Sunday, June 21, Mr. and Mrs. Whitney B. Stout, of Sidney, Ohio; and Mr. and Mrs. Wilson S. Dunkle and Mrs. W. D. Stout, of Washington township. A most enjoyable time was had by all.

The many friends of Professor W. B. Stout, teacher of agriculture in the Sidney high school, were surprised to hear the announcement of his wedding on Wednesday, June 10, to Miss Maude Ellen Taylor, of North Canton Ohio. The wedding ceremony took place at the Community Christian church, Rev. M. A. Cossaboom officiating. Only the members of the immediate families were present. The party motored to Forest Inn immediately following the ceremony where a sumptuous wedding breakfast was served. Professor Stout is a graduate of the Ohio State College of Agriculture and a member of the Alpha Gamma Rho. He has taught in this city for the past three years and has found a large acquaintance here of many friends. The bride is also a graduate of Ohio State university, college of commerce and journalism. She has visited here on several occasions. After a trip thru Michigan and Indiana they will be at home at 129 Piper street, Sidney, Ohio.—Sidney Daily News.

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity

Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milch cows to provide

- (1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
- (2) Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
- (3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.

This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides. Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

Where Lake George enters Lake Champlain, in New York state, the French in 1756 set up a post which they named Fort Carillon. This became a concentration point for French expeditions under Montcalm and others. In 1758 the fort was attacked by 16,000 British under Abercrombie. Though the French had but 4,000 men they beat off the enemy, causing the latter a loss of 2,000 men. A year later Amherst with 11,000 men took the fort after the French had retired.

By the time of the Revolution the fort was generally known by its Indian name—"Ticonderoga," a corruption of the Iroquois word "cheonderoga," meaning "sounding" water. On May 10, 1775, Ethan Allen and 83 Green Mountain Boys captured the fort.

Dinner to Lafayette Marked by Hilarity

A subscription dinner was, on Tuesday, given at Matthew Wilson's hotel by a number of the members of the legislature to General Lafayette, pursuant to arrangements previously made by Dr. Kitchen of the senate and Messrs. Gilleland and McCreath of the house of representatives, the committee appointed for that purpose by the subscribers. His excellency, the governor, General Lafayette, the heads of departments, Judge Gibson, Mr. G. W. Lafayette, Mr. Levasseur, the committee from New York in attendance upon the general and a few veterans of the Revolution, residents of this place, were present as guests. Mr. Speaker Marks presided and was assisted by Mr. Speaker Sutherland and Mr. Roberts of the house of representatives. About 120 gentlemen sat down to the dinner, which was served at a little after four o'clock. The dinner was an excellent one, says a report in the Harrisburg Chronicle, February 3, 1825.

The most cordial hilarity prevailed throughout the whole entertainment, in the course of which, at the particular and repeated request of the general, "Hail Columbia" was sung by himself and the whole company standing. The governor and General Lafayette retired at about eight o'clock and the company broke up shortly afterwards. At 11 o'clock on Wednesday General Lafayette took his departure for York.

and valuable stores. Captain Delaplace was in charge of the garrison of 48 men. He was asleep when Allen rapped on his door with a sword. "Your errand?" demanded the sleepy commander. "I order you to surrender," said Allen. "By what authority?" inquired the astonished officer. "By the authority of the Great Jehovah and the Continental congress," Allen is said to have replied. Benedict Arnold was a member of the American expedition.

St. Clair and 11,000 Continentals abandoned the fort in 1777 on the approach of Burgoyne with a superior force. Colonel Brown with 500 men tried to retake the place, but after capturing 300 prisoners and many facts, besides releasing 200 Americans, he had to retire. After the Revolution Fort Ticonderoga became a picturesque ruin, but was restored to something like its original state at the expense of Mrs. Stephen Pell of New York in 1909. A monument to the Continentals, shown above, who fought in and around Ticonderoga was recently unveiled at that historic place. It is the gift of Horace A. Moses. The work, executed by Charles Kock, shows Liberty triumphant.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Lafayette's Pride in American Citizenship

The following anecdotes of Lafayette appeared in the National Gazette of August 28, 1824:

As Lafayette passed the house of the late John Hancock in Boston, the mayor said to him: "There sits the widow of your deceased friend." He immediately caught her eye, and in the most enthusiastic manner pressed his hand upon his heart. She burst into tears and exclaimed: "I have now lived long enough!"

A man, while in conversation with Lafayette, observed he spoke the English language remarkably well: "And why should I not," he replied, "being an American just returned from a long visit to Europe?"

When we took a glass of wine in company with several other men with the general, previous to his landing at the quarantine ground from the Cadmus, one of the party addressed him both as marquis and general, and then asked him which he preferred. He unhesitatingly and emphatically replied: "I am an American general."

Branded in the Valley

By MARTHA PIERCE

WNU Service

AS the day died, three horsemen rode down from the mountain and struck into the trail that leads across the mesa. They rode in silence, save once when the leader half turned in his saddle and spoke to the rider nearest him.

"How far is it, Jim?"

"Jim lifted his bridle reins, and his horse sprang alongside the big gray of the leader.

"Bout thirty miles yet," he said briefly; "we'll make it by nine o'clock."

The moon climbed up over a high bluff and looked down upon a little valley where a small, swift stream ran through green meadows. In the midst of the valley one tree stood like a sentinel near a low log house set a stone's throw from the brink of the stream.

A fire that leaped upon the hearth and flung its ruddy light through the small windows served to light the rude interior, its uncertain gleams half revealing, half concealing the rough unthoughtfulness of a man who sat before the fireplace holding a child upon his knee.

"Now tell me," he was saying, "why you didn't go home with Mrs. Potter today, when she rode all the way over here on purpose. Mrs. Potter's right about it bein' too lonesome for you to stay here when I'm out in the hills. It is mighty lonesome for a little girl like you. You better let me take you over tomorrow." She shook her head until her misty hair flew out like an oriole.

"Who'd keep house for you?" she asked, as if that question settled the whole matter.

He laughed weakly. "You do take pretty good care of your old dad, don't you? And you're all the housekeeper he's had for a good spell now."

"Since ma went to heaven," said the child gravely.

He started and looked at her curiously.

"Who told you that?" he said, almost roughly.

"Told me what?"

She was looking at the fire intently, and had a half-absorbed expression. "That ma went to heaven. Oh, she told me herself, before she went, and she made me promise I'd come, too. She told me all about the angels and God and everything. She said the angels were all around, every place, and since she died I know it's true, 'cause I've seen 'em. There's one right there in the fire now. I've been seeing it ever so long. A little baby angel with its wings spread out to fly. See, pa? Right there, in the middle of the brightest—see?"

"No," said the man, slowly, "I can't quite make it out." Suddenly he started.

"What's that?"

He opened the door and looked out. Three men on horseback confronted him. He was covered instantly.

"We're onto you," said one laconically, "say your prayers."

He grew pale beneath the bronze, but he faced them resolutely, and stood a trifle straighter.

"What does this mean, men?" he said. "What have I done?"

The leader laughed grimly.

"When a man's too handy with his brandin' irons he's apt to run up against trouble some day. You've got about two minutes to make your last will and testament."

At last, after a minute as long as years, he spoke stumbingly, as if words of entreaty came hardly to his lips.

"You have homes, men, and little ones, maybe. Think of the child, and have mercy." He caught her up suddenly and held her before them.

Startled by the sudden movement, the big gray reared and pawed the air. There was a sharp report and a shrill scream through the stillness of the valley; then the father stood looking stupidly at the limp and senseless thing he held in his arms, and the swift red stream that dyed his shirt sleeve.

The big gray had bolted, and after a moment of horrified waiting the two who were left wheeled their horses and rode away through the night leaving the outcast alone with his dead.

The sun climbed up over the high bluff and looked down on the green valley where the one tree stood by the low log house. Under the tree a man was stooping over a little mound by the side of a long one, patting it softly and babbling to himself about his baby, and the little angel in the fire. After awhile he wandered away hatless and coatless toward the mountain.

No one lives in the house in the valley. They say that when the moon is full fire leaps upon the deserted hearth and flings a ruddy glow through the windows, and he who listens may presently hear the shrill scream of a child, and the clatter of fleeing horsemen across the mesa. But others say it is a myth, and one can see nothing but the moonlight reflected from the windows, and hear nothing save the dismal and long-drawn cry of a coyote.

Medal Presented to Dazzy Vance

Herewith is photographic reproduction of the medal given Dazzy Vance, the Brooklyn pitcher, at a recent game played in Brooklyn. Vance, it will be remembered, was adjudged the most valuable player in the National league. The medal is a distinction separate and apart from the prize awarded him.

Major Leagues Have Many Coast Players

A perusal of the rosters of the American and National leagues discloses the information that the Pacific Coast league, like Abou Ben Adhem's name, leads all the rest in the number of athletics furnished for these major league circuits, writes Les Goates in the Salt Lake Deseret News.

The Coast league now has 33 players on big league teams, counting only players capable of holding down their jobs regularly. The Southern association is second with 31. The American association is next with 30, and the International league is fourth with 25. These four circuits have provided a heavy majority of the major league players.

Koenig Is in Demand

Mark Koenig (above), youthful shortstop for the St. Paul Saints, is being eagerly sought by Miller Huggins, manager of the New York Yankees, to bolster up the eastern American league entry. Koenig, sensation of the Saints, was given a glowing report by Paul Krichell, chief scout of the Yankees.

Sport Notes

George Chancey has 99 knockouts to his credit.

Amherst college has added basket ball to its major sports program.

The Royal Canadian Golf association has decided to sanction the use of the steel-headed club.

The world's longest golf drive, 470 yards, is claimed by Jimmy Guilane of Colorado Springs, Colo.

Gold wrist watches will be awarded the winning crews in the People's regatta, the big July 4 rowing contests at Philadelphia.

The Far-Eastern Athletic association has decided to hold the Olympic games in the Far East every four years instead of every two years after 1927.

Coach "Rusty" Cullow, University of Washington crew mentor, has announced that he would remain at Washington for another term of four years.

Sam Shaw of Oregon City, Ore., captain of the University of Washington 1923 intercollegiate champion crew, has signed a contract as assistant coach at Yale.

Corrine Condon, fourteen year old Omaha swimming star, slipped a tenth of a second from her own world's record of 21.8 in the senior 40-yard free style event at an official midwestern A. A. U.

Diamond Notes

The Cleveland baseball club has 17 players who grew up on farms.

Joe Wood has signed to remain three years longer as Yale baseball coach.

Pitcher Rudy Kallio has been sent back to Salt Lake of the Pacific league by the Boston Red Sox.

Riffe, University of Kentucky pitcher, hurled a no-hit-no-run game against Centre college at Lexington.

New Orleans has obtained Pitcher Watson W. Clark, a southpaw, from the Cleveland Indians on option.

Nelson (Chicken) Hawks, new first baseman of the Phils, is the hitting sensation of the league just at present.

The Cincinnati Reds are reported to be interested in the work of Benny Gaudette, a young outfielder with Jersey City.

Catcher Ernie Vick of the Cardinals was sent back to St. Louis by Rickey, while the team was on the road, because of an infected leg.

George Pipgras was turned back to the New York Yankees by Atlanta because of lack of control. He was ordered to report to Nashville.

Tommy Sullivan, outfielder and catcher of the Aberdeen (Wash.) team of the independent Southwest Timber league, has been signed by Cincinnati.

According to baseball records only one man with one arm played in the big leagues. "One-Arm Dally" pitched in the old National league about thirty years ago.

Catcher Beumel of the Evansville Three-Eye league club has been released to the Saginaw (Mich.) club under option. Pitcher Meador also was released.

It is feared that Norman McMillan, St. Paul infielder, will be out of the game two months because of injuries suffered when he ran into the grand stand chasing a foul.

Ever since Hughie Jennings introduced his colorful style of coaching a large number of ball players have tried to imitate him, but to date none has been successful.

Joe Hauser, Athletics' hard-hitting first baseman, who broke his kneecap this spring, has discarded his crutches and is now getting around with the aid of a good strong cane.

A. C. Vance of Brooklyn loses but continues to strike out the opposing batters in great numbers, and Sisler and Hornsby continue to hit while their teams continue to lose.

Babe Ruth Gaining

Babe Ruth wasn't altogether successful in his springtime reducing efforts, but his recent illness has melted thirty pounds of his elephantine frame, as can be plainly seen in the picture above. However, he has got eight pounds of it back, and his appetite gives promise of more.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting, and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Will you let me help you select the memorial for your lot. Call at show room. NO AGENTS.

Geologist ExplainsCauses of Landslides

In describing some troublesome landslides that have taken place in England, owing to wet weather, Mr. William Platt, author of "A Popular Geology," says:

The causes are simple enough. Whenever the geological formation is that of alternate hard and soft rocks, and when this occurs in any sufficiently steep bank, hill or mountain, there will always be the risk of a landslide, especially after heavy rains, which soak into the softer layers and make them loose and slippery.

Landslides may be divided into two classes—natural and artificial. The former occur in the wear and tear of nature.

That picturesque mountain in the Derbyshire Pennines called Mam Tor is so liable to landslides that it has been nicknamed locally "The Shivering Mountain." Another celebrated instance is the landslide near Shanklin, Isle of Wight.

At Merok, in Norway (Norangsdal) a huge landslide dammed up a river valley, causing the water to pile up and form a lake. The people who lived in the village in the valley managed to escape, but their red-roofed cottages can be seen today under the clear waters of the huge tarn thus formed.

THE HOUSE BY THE SIDE OF THE ROAD

(Sam Walter Foss.)

There are hermit souls that live withdrawn

In the peace of their self-content;
There are souls, like stars, that dwell apart,

In a fellowless firmament;

There are pioneer souls that blaze their paths

Where highways never ran;—
But let me live by the side of the road

And be a friend to man.

Let me live in a house by the side of the road

Where the race of men go by—

The men who are good and the men who are bad,

As good and as bad as I.

I would not sit in the scorner's seat,

Or hurl the cynic's ban;—

Let me live in a house by the side of the road

And be a friend to man.

I see from my house by the side of the road,

By the side of the highway of life,

The men who press with the ardor of hope,

The men who are faint with the strife.

But I turn not away from their smiles nor their tears—

Both are parts of an Infinite plan;—

Let me live in my house by the side of the road

And be a friend to man.

I know there are brook-gladdened meadows ahead

And mountains of wearisome height;

That the road passes on through the long afternoon

And stretches away to the night.

And still I rejoice when the travelers rejoice,

And weep with the strangers that moan,

Nor live in my house by the side of the road

Like a man who dwells alone.

Let me live in my house by the side of the road

Where the race of men go by—

They are good, they are bad, they are weak, they are strong,

Wise, foolish—so am I.

Then why should I sit in the scorner's seat

Or hurl the cynic's ban?—

Let me live in my house by the side of the road

And be a friend to man.

We print the above verse at the request of some of our subscribers.

After a man gets off one witty remark he is expected to give a continuous performance.

Yes, Clarence, there are workers and workers. One class make a specialty of working the other class.

Insect Forager That Is Blessing to Man

A caterpillar, known as the "Painted Lady," is one of the most remarkable of insect foragers. These strange little creatures move in vast armies, but never attack field crops or cultivated flowers, but, seemingly with deliberate intent, clear the territory over which they move of many harmful weeds and grasses. The insects crossed the Mexican border some months ago and invaded southern California in great hordes. Millions of them would move past a flower garden or field of blossoming clover, stopping on the way only to attack nettles and weeds and leaving the blossoms intact. The army traveled across the famous Death valley in California at the rate of about fifteen miles an hour. The desert, which stops many insect migrations, appeared to hold no terrors for these, since they were able to find isolated patches of their favorite food sufficient to sustain life. The "Painted ladies," which derive their name from the exceptionally beautiful coloring of their wings, have been long known below the border.

Transportation Triumph

Two steamers moved a hotel from Oakland, Cal., to Nome, Alaska. An entire caravansary with everything complete from the clerk's desk and a bench for the bellhops to the furnishings for the top-floor bedrooms was manufactured in pieces in California to furnish accommodations for the transient trade in the town near the Arctic circle where the pieces were reassembled into a furnished hotel.

AMUSEMENTS

Melodrama as you like it—this, in brief, sums up the latest Paramount production "Contraband," Alan Crosland's vivid picturization of the novel by Clarence Budington Kelland, now at the Met theater.

Those who read the book know that the story revolves around the efforts of a young girl editor in a small town to rid the community of the vicious political elements who are in control of the local government.

In the course of her investigations the girl discovers that even those forces that are presumably on the side of the low and order are in reality in league with her enemies. But with the knowledge that she is fighting for the right and with the help of a young professor, who has been a victim of the political ring, she is successful in cleaning up the town.

The picture is chock-full of thrilling action and sheds considerable light on present-day activities of rum-runners and bootleggers. The inside workings of a small-town newspaper are accurately portrayed, and the atmosphere and background of the average Main Street is true to life.

The film has its lighter moments and there is humor of a particularly appealing kind. The romance of the girl editor and the pompous professor furnishes many a laugh, and the rivalry between the photographer and the haberdasher for the honor of being acclaimed the handsomest and best dressed man in town adds to the merriment.

An exceptionally fine cast has been assembled, every member of which is perfect in his or her characterization. The feature roles are in the capable hands of such well known screen celebrities as Lois Wilson, Noah Berry, Raymond Hatton and Raymond McKee.

Tigers Like Water.

Tigers are extremely fond of bathing. In a zoo, if a tub be provided, they will eagerly make use of its facilities for ablution. They are first-rate swimmers, and in former days it was reckoned at Singapore that they "ate a Chinaman a night," swimming across from the mainland to get him.

VIA THE 4:15 TRAIN

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(Copyright, 1925, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

EMMIE DAVENPORT knew now that only a miracle would bring her a husband. One by one she had seen the friends of her girlhood grow to womanhood and walk off with the few eligible youths for miles around until the whole country was shorn of young men.

Furthermore, no men who had once left Oxbow village ever returned. Small wonder that the thin line of rails just south of the town held a mystic charm for Emmie. And she had an especial fondness for the 4:15. She never failed to wave her blue gingham apron and always dimpled and laughed when her salutes were returned by travel-jaded passengers or good-natured trainmen.

Then one day, picking berries close down by the embankment, she spotted a particular brakeman in blue jumpers who leaned nonchalantly in the door of the caboose. She was near enough to see that he was healthily freckled and that he grinned infectiously as he flung her a gay greeting.

From that day it was to him, and him alone, that Emmie waved. It was of him that she dreamed at night.

Now Oxbow village can be reached by automobile, but only by the most ambitious. Yet one night an old acquaintance of Emmie's appeared suddenly in a much abused car beside a most profane husband, who swore that, sick mother-in-law or not, never again would he drive a car to Oxbow village.

The old acquaintance was Ella Bainton and after ascertaining that her mother, reported by telegraph to be dying immediately, was sufficiently recovered to get her own meals she made speedy rounds of the village, calling, as fate would have it, first on the Davenport.

"Poor thing!" Ella had gloated, "how do you stand it buried here?"

Two bright spots glowed in Emmie's cheeks, and her slim hands clenched. "I'm—I'm engaged," she said, "although nobody knows it yet! He's a railroad man!" she declared. "Goes through here every day and although he can't stop off he always signals. Some day"—she paused for Ella was not listening. She was calculating just how many people she could spread the news among before hauled from the village by a husband keen to return to civilization.

It speaks well for Emmie's previous reputation for veracity that not for one minute did Ella doubt her word. Nor, for that matter, did the neighbors. Nor did Emmie's mother, to whom the choice morsel of gossip eventually came, although she found her daughter oddly reluctant to divulge any details as to her meeting with her fiancé, his prospects, or their plans.

Emmie herself underwent various phases of emotion. Chagrin, remorse, and gradually a sort of guilty pleasure. Her status had certainly improved. More than that, she could almost believe that some definite bond had been established between herself and the blue-clad figure with whose daily salutes the entire neighborhood now concerned itself.

Emmie took absently to berry-picking, spending most of her time down by the embankment. It was on one such afternoon as she sat waiting for the arrival of the express that she found herself wishing that something would happen to slow the monster down and afford her more than the fleeting glimpse of her mythical fiancé.

Not quite as she had imagined, her wish materialized. Something somehow went wrong with the engineer's brain or heart or hands, or with the signals set for him. No one ever learned from him, for when they found him he had gone beyond the reach of earthly inquiries.

At the switch just below Emmie's the mammoth locomotive suddenly cavorted, leaped the rails, and piled up the string of cars in the rear.

White and shaken, Emmie was among the first at the dreadful scene. But only by chance did she, some time later, stumble on a blue figure thrown clear of the debris—a figure which evidently the doctor after a casual inspection had taken to be lifeless, for with a shake of his head he was hastening by.

Emmie, alone, threw herself down by the quiet figure. "My darling, my darling," she moaned. "Heaven brought you to me too late."

The figure stirred—ever so slightly. "Not Heaven—rather the 4:15, and that is always on time!" For a second, roguish blue eyes looked into hers; then a spasm of pain crossed his freckled face and he lapsed into unconsciousness.

A month recuperating at Emmie's, a constant dependence on her willing hands and feet, a continual companionship—but why elaborate? Other men before the hero of this story have fallen in love with their nurses.

But the neighbors and Emmie's mother, on the day that the 4:15 took them out into the world where life is lived with a capital L, shook their heads wonderingly and discussed in bewilderment just how a man and a girl could become engaged with only a toss of a hand and the wave of a blue-checked apron.

On Growing Old

We all have to grow old, so do your best not to worry about it. For over three thousand years people have been trying to discover the secret of perpetual youth, but they have never discovered it, and they never will. Old age is a gracious and a happy state when we accept it naturally. It is only when we struggle that it becomes a tragedy.

LOST FIGHT FOR FREEDOM

Noblesville, Ind., June 25.—(UP.)—D. C. Stephenson, former grand dragon of the Indiana Ku Klux Klan, today lost his fight for freedom on bond, while awaiting trial on charges of murdering Miss Madge Oberholtzer, of Indianapolis.

Judge Hines in Hamilton county court ruled that Stephenson was not entitled to bail after weighing evidence presented at a four-day hearing last week on the bail plea.

Judge Hines also denied the bail petition of Earl Klenck and Earl Gentry, jointly indicted with Stephenson.

Perhaps He is Dating Up His Jungle Sheba

Wonder what this gaily dressed individual is talking about! Perhaps he is "dating up" his best girl or arranging for a "little party" for the evening. The photographer forgot to have an interpreter present when he snapped the picture.

Anyway it has been established that the young man is a Zulu Chief-tain and is talking somewhere in the heart of darkest Africa and seems to enjoy the experience.

The telephone he is using is an American made instrument from the shops of The Western Electric Company, one of the affiliated Bell system companies, and is the same as used by The Ohio Bell Telephone Company.

Did you note the latest style in foot wear this gentleman affects? Let us hope our flappers do not take it up.

Every day someone discovers a new use for the telephone. Recently three persons living in Middle Haddam, Conn., who had been arrested for failure to license their dogs, were unable to get to court on account of blocked roads. The justice of the peace in charge of the case heard the evidence over the telephone and fined each $1 and costs. This was mailed in and the case was ended.

Queer Contributions to Medical Science

The Warwickshire county councillor who bequeathed his body to the General hospital, Birmingham, in the hope that light would be thrown on the origin of headache, "the unmerciful scourge that has wrecked my happiness from my earliest recollection," followed a long line of posthumous benefactors to medical science.

Perhaps the most remarkable of all was Jeremy Bentham, the philosopher, who directed that his skeleton should be clothed, provided with a specially molded wax head, and presented to the medical section of University college, London, where it may still be seen.

Hospitals often receive queer bequests. Charing Cross hospital not long ago received a bag containing forty-eight farthings, a bust of Queen Victoria, and the return half of a railway ticket. Another famous hospital received the deeds of a freehold house, a pawnticket for a valuable sporting trophy, a diamond ring, several prize rabbit skins, and twenty aspidistras in pots.—London Times.

City of Quaint Dress

The city of Seou, now called Kello, the seat of the Korean government, is a place of quaint dress. White is the universal color of outer clothing, whether for men or for women. The women, who are short and fat, wear fantastic balloon cotton skirts. The men wear a "Mother Hubbard" robe, baggy trousers tied at the ankles, and a transparent "plug" hat, many sizes too small, tied under the chin. Long thin whiskers, great horn-rimmed goggles, hair put up in a queer topknot to signify manhood, and pipes with stems two or three feet long complete the picture. When in mourning for a male relative a man wears an immense straw hat shaped like a toadstool.

Chairs and Their Makers

It is probable that very early in American cabinet making rocking chairs were introduced. It is not unreasonable to attribute their origin to a date previous to the Revolution, but after 1750. Not until the Nineteenth century was well under way, however, did that type become common as an article of furniture. It is probable also that Windsor chairs were the first to be fitted with rockers. The Windsor chair itself was invented in England, and its comfort quickly made its appeal. The old chair makers knew how to adapt their furniture to the human anatomy and the American inventor of the rocker added still more comfort.

TEACHERS' MEETING

Is Closed—Homes Scored By Mrs. A. H. Reeve.

Cedar Point, June 26.—The Ohio State Teachers' Association's annual convention closed here today with an address by Mrs. A. H. Reeve of Philadelphia, president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, in which Mrs. Reeve lamented the apparent neglect of moral, physical and civic education in the home.

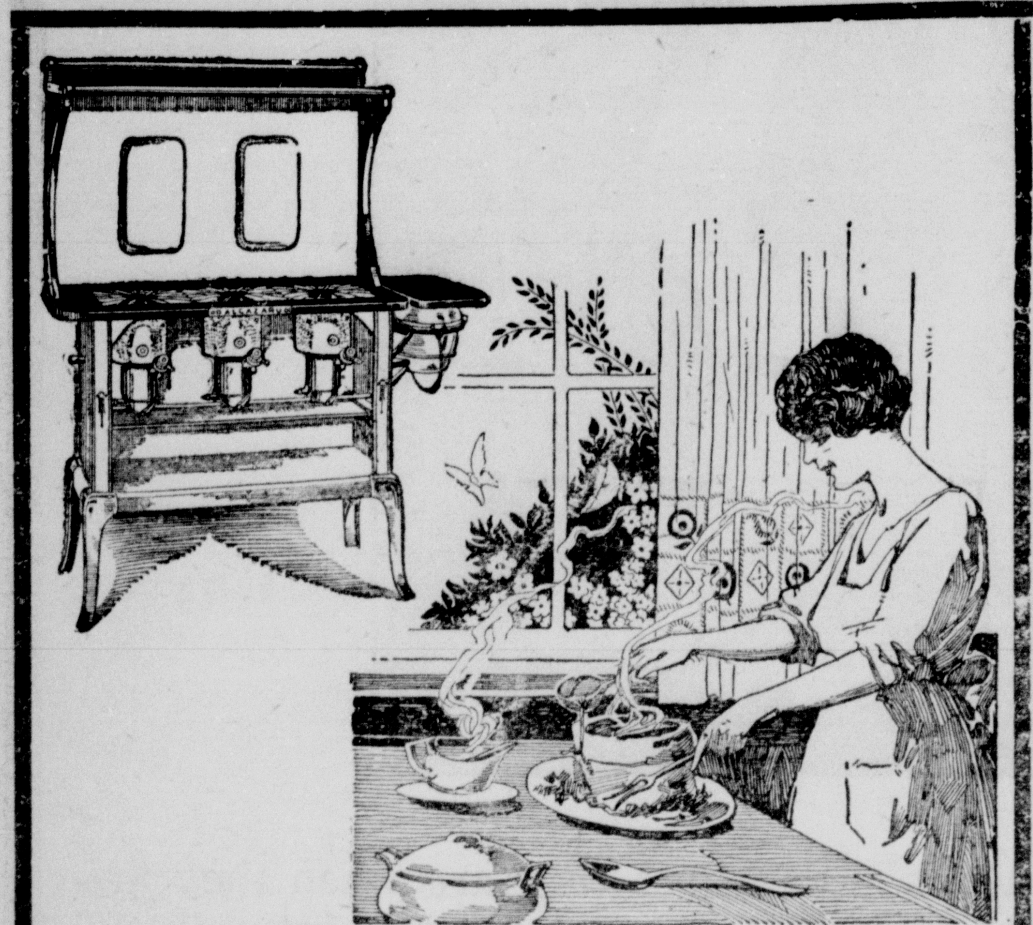

Declaring that automobiles, movies and jazz dances were responsible for present criticized conditions among the youth of school age, she asserted that their elders wanted to enjoy these same modern pleasures and that they were kept back largely only by convention and public opinion.

Dr. George Carrothers of Ohio University, asserted school conditions in many places in Ohio were as bad as those in the Philippines. Dr. Lawson G. Lowery, director of the child guidance clinic of Cleveland, asked for a higher personality and mental rating of teachers.

GOLF INSTRUCTOR

Was Held Blameless For Girl's Death.

Dayton, O., June 25.—Jack Brabant, 24, instructor at a local golf club, was held blameless in a verdict rendered by Coroner J. F. Torrence late yesterday after inquest into the death of Miss Irene List, 22, Circleville school teacher, who died after misapplying poison, purchased for her by Brabant.

What Do You Know About Sole Leather?

HERE ARE A FEW LEATHER FACTS:

The best leather is tanned Steer Hide. Steers are raised for their meat—not for their hides. There is as great a difference in the quality of leather as in the quality of meat.

Good leather always comes from over good meat, and vice versa. Heavy hides are taken from cattle four years or older. Most thick leather nowadays is artificially swelled by acid—often sulphuric acid, which rots the fiber, rots the stitching and destroys the wear. The breeding up of cattle by dairymen and the younger kill to supply tender meat, produce the best hide and the best leather, of medium thickness.

Country hides are badly cut in the skinning and are of little value for sole leather.

Most new-paper quotations are on country hides. Packer Hides are rarely flesh-cut in skinning and, therefore, bring several times the price of country hides.

Hides are always heavily salted to preserve, and are sold salt and all.

The average weight of a green-salted, steer hide is 60 lbs. To properly tan, it must remain in the tanning liquors from six to nine months.

A 60 lb. green salted hide will lose 20 lbs. or $\frac{1}{3}$ its green weight in a good, natural, non-acid tannage.

A tanned hide will give four distinct qualities of leather.

Dolls of Long Ago

Every once in a while these modern days, the people of the world discover that some of their vaunted inventions are not so new after all.

Dr. George Byron Gordon, director of the University of Pennsylvania museum, said that the museum today contains specimens of dolls dating from 3500 B. C.

In one collection there is a set of dishes—doll dishes—dating from 4500 B. C. There are toy chariots, toy horses, toy drivers.

Tomorrow afternoon delegates to the convention will place a wreath on the tomb of President McKinley.

EASTERN BELIEFS CONCERNING CRYSTAL

The two largest flawless crystal spheres in the world were recently exhibited in New York. One of them measures nine inches in diameter and the other just fifteen-sixteenths of an inch less. The value of the pair is placed at $50,000.

The spheres were brought to New York from China, where they were cut from a perfect Burma crystal with a small metal hatchet. The work required infinite patience.

In ancient times in the Far East and in Europe crystals were supposed to be ice in permanent form. In Japan small crystals were said to be the breath of the Great White Dragon, while the larger ones were supposed to come from the Violet Dragon.

World's Deepest Well

The deepest well in the world was completed recently by engineers near Latrobe, Pa., when they struck natural gas at a depth of 7,428 feet, or almost one and one-half miles, says Popular Science Monthly. Work on the well was begun in 1922, and drilling continued for 30 months. The gas is now flowing at a rate of 500,000 cubic feet a day. The cost of sinking the well was about $200,000.

PATRICK E. CROWLEY

New York Central's President To Be Doctor of Laws.

(N. C. W. C. News Service.)

New York, June 26.—Patrick E. Crowley, whose railroad career has extended from messenger to a station agent at age of 18, then to President of the New York Central lines, will receive the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws, at Villanova College, next Tuesday it was announced today.

The history of Mr. Crowley's attainment, from messenger boy on the Erie Railroad to the presidency of one of the largest railroad systems in the world, is considered a chapter of business romance. His first job was as messenger boy at the station in which his father, Dennis Crowley, was station agent, at the age of 12. Two years later, without waiting to finish the grammar course in school, he took a full-time job as messenger at $5 per month. When he was 18 years old he was appointed station agent on the Erie at Custer City, Pa. There he qualified as a dispatcher's operator, and this resulted in his transfer to the Erie dispatcher's office at Buffalo.

In the late eighties he became an employe of the New York Central when that road leased the Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg railroad, and was promoted to chief dispatcher and transferred to Watertown, N. Y.

Two months later, he was promoted to Trainmaster. On September 12, 1900, he was appointed Chief Trainmaster. On August 24, 1901, the day before his 37th birthday, he was appointed Superintendent of the Pennsylvania Division, with headquarters at Corning, N. Y.

Three years later he was made Assistant General Superintendent, with headquarters at Syracuse, N. Y., and on March 1, 1907, he went to Albany as Assistant General Manager. On April 15, 1912, he became General Manager, and then General Manager, lines East, of the New York Central, at New York. On September 14, 1918, he was made Vice-President in charge of Operation, which position he held until he became Federal Manager of the New York Central for the war period.

In June, 1890, he married Miss Caroline Nichols of Attica, N. Y. They have two sons and two daughters.

AMERICA

My country, 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty,
Of thee I sing;
Land where my fathers died,
Land of the pilgrims' pride,
From every mountain side
Let Freedom ring.

My native country, thee,
Land of the noble free,
Thy name I love;
I love thy rocks and rills,
Thy woods and templed hills,
My heart with rapture thrills,
Like that above.

'Let music swell the breeze
And ring from all the trees
Sweet Freedom's song;
Let mortal tongues awake,
Let all that breathe partake,
Let rocks their silence break,
The sound prolong.

Our Father's God, to thee,
Author of Liberty,
To thee we sing;
Long may our land be bright
With Freedom's holy light;
Protect us by thy might,
Great God, our King.
